

GUEST EDITOR

Epp Lauk (PhD) is a journalism professor at Vytautas Magnus University in Kaunas, Lithuania, and a Professor Emerita at Jyväskylä University, Finland. Her publications include over 200 articles, book chapters, books, edited books, and research reports on media democratisation and transformation, media and communication ethics, and in a broad spectrum of issues linked with journalism change and professionalisation. She has participated in many international and national research projects. Currently, she is one of the leading researchers in a Horizon Europe project called DIACOMET. E-mail: epp.lauk@vdu.lt

AUTHORS

Peter Berglez is an associate professor of media and communications and the director of research at the Media and Communications Department at Örebro University, Sweden. His theoretical and empirical contributions to the understanding of global journalism are internationally established in both journalism research and education, and his research interests include journalism studies, environmental communication, and cooperative / collaborative communication. E-mail: peter.berglez@oru.se

Tobias Eberwein (PhD) is Deputy Director of the Institute for Comparative Media and Communication Studies (CMC) of the Austrian Academy of Sciences and the University of Klagenfurt, where he also leads the Research Group “Media Accountability and Media Change”. His research focuses on the fields of media accountability and media governance, journalism and media innovations, as well as comparative media and communication studies. E-mail: tobias.eberwein@oeaw.ac.at

Susanne Fengler, Prof. Dr., is the academic director of the Erich Brost Institute for International Journalism at TU Dortmund University and is a full professor for international journalism at the Institute of Journalism, TU Dortmund University, Germany. She has directed numerous comparative research projects in the field of media and migration, media accountability, and foreign coverage. E-mail: susanne.fengler@tu-dortmund.de

Halliki Harro-Loit (PhD) is a professor of journalism at the Institute of Social Studies of the University of Tartu, Estonia. She has published more than 100 scholarly articles in peer reviewed journals and edited volumes. Her current research interests include temporal analysis of journalistic discourse, comparative analysis of journalism cultures, journalism and communication ethics and law, media policy, as well as discourse analysis and interpersonal communication. She was the Primary Investigator of the Mediadelcom project and is a team leader in DIACOMET. E-mail: halliki.harro@ut.ee

Marten Juurik is a junior research fellow in ethics at the Centre for Ethics, mainly focused on topics related to information ethics, data protection and research integrity. E-mail: Marten.juurik@ut.ee

Anna Kandyla is a Research Fellow at the Hellenic Foundation for European and Foreign Policy (ELIAMEP) in Athens and an official at the Hellenic Ministry of Economy and Finance. Her work relates to contemporary debates about democratic politics and legitimacy, focusing on the European Union. Her research interests comprise European media policy and governance, EU politics and European integration. E-mail: akandyla@eliamep.gr

Marcus Kreutler is the manager of the Institute of Journalism at TU Dortmund University. Previously, he has been a researcher at the Erich Brost Institute for International Journalism, as well as a journalist and a journalism trainer. He contributed to several international research efforts, most recently the Horizon 2020-funded Mediadelcom project. His research interests include international and transnational communication, foreign coverage, and media accountability. E-mail: marcus.kreutler@tu-dortmund.de

Mart Ots is an associate professor of business administration at the Jönköping International Business School, and at the Media, Management and Transformation Centre, Sweden. He has been an editor-in-chief of the Journal of Media Business Studies and board member of the European Media Management Association (EMMA). His research interests include the digital and sustainable transformation of media and marketing industries, with a particular interest in emerging or shifting professional logics and practices and their implications for media policy. E-mail: mart.ots@ju.se

Mari-Liisa Parder, PhD, is a research fellow in ethics at the Centre for Ethics, her research interests are related to research integrity and research ethics, as well as with freedom of information and transparency. E-mail: Mari-liisa.parder@ut.ee

Zrinjka Peruško is a full professor at the Department of Media and Communication at the Faculty of Political Science of the University of Zagreb, Croatia. She participated in several EU and UNESCO research networks and was the principal investigator in a number of research projects. Her research interests include comparative analysis of the transformations of media systems, media cultures, and audience dynamics, often with a historical perspective and focus on Central and Eastern Europe. E-mail: zrinjka.perusko@fpzg.hr

Evangelia Psychogiopoulou is an assistant professor at the Department of Political Science and International Relations of the University of Peloponnese and a Senior Research Fellow at the Hellenic Foundation for European and Foreign Policy (ELIAMEP). Her main research areas are EU law and governance, EU values and fundamental rights, EU law-making, EU law and policies for the digital transformation, culture and the media, and judicial dialogue in Europe. E-mail: epsychogiopoulou@eliamep.gr

Anda Rožukalne is a member of Academia Europaea. She holds the position of a professor at Faculty of Communication, Riga Stradiņš University. Rožukalne's research interests include journalism cultures, media systems, media regulation and self-regulation, media audience studies, and development of AI aided audience research tools. E-mail: anda.rozukalne@rsu.lv

Ilva Skulte is an associate professor in Communication at the Riga Stradiņš University. Her research interests include intersections of media, communication and culture, especially new emergent practices and groups of actors involved. E-mail: ilva.skulte@rsu.lv

Filip Trbojević is a research and teaching assistant at the Department of Media and Communication at the Faculty of Political Science of the University of Zagreb, Croatia. He is developing his doctoral dissertation on the topic of the illiberal turn in political and media systems in Central and Eastern Europe, and his broader research interests include media systems, democratic transformations, and quantitative and qualitative research methodology. E-mail: filip.trbojevic@fpzg.hr

Dina Vozab is an assistant professor at the Department of Media and Communication at the Faculty of Political Science of the University of Zagreb, Croatia. She participated in several research networks and projects, and her research interests include media systems, media and democracy, media in post-socialist Europe, political communication, and media audiences. E-mail: dina.vozab@fpzg.hr